A resilient fictional city service keeps a written inventory of critical supplies, checks the list at regular intervals, and assigns a named person to replenish each item before the reserve falls below its minimum level. Clear ownership makes routine preparation easier to audit.